v1

A picture on the mantelpiece
Is all that's left of you;
Your once bright colours faded now
To softer sepia hue;
And in some corner of your smile
A vaguely stirring theme,
Of warmer days, now lost behind
A half remembered dream;

And as the firelight dances,
Time will pass;
And as the mood advances,
Time will pass.

v2

The glow will creep across the room
As evening steals outside,
While past and present spark as one,
And flicker, side by side,
To catch a glint within your eye,
Some trick within the flame,
That flits between the knowing well,
And wondering all the same;

And as the shadows lengthen,
Time will pass;
And as these longings strengthen,
Time will pass.
