- v1 Wow, that was one hell of a party,
It's not just our heads that are sore:
Even the table we danced on
Is now lying in bits on the floor,
And I feel an apology forming,
If only I knew just what for
- v2 Well, that was one hell of a party,
My brain is still locked in a skid,
My inside feels like a dustbin,
My outside still rattles like the lid;
And I feel strangely guilty for something
I seriously doubt that I did
- Br 1 Recollecting nought about
Some indiscretion thought about
But surely never brought about,

Just one night short of a one night stand,
A vague plan away from impeccably planned,
Rock and roll short of a rock and roll band,
- Br 2 Morning can no longer recognise
That glint within a stranger's eyes,
Or whispered words where danger lies,

Just a fine line short of a very fine line,
Perfection away from a perfect crime,
Memory short of a memorable time,
- v3 Yes, that was one hell of a party,
And I can only vaguely recall,
As we struggle to carry the empties
To the black plastic bag in the hall,
Some liaison which might have been dangerous
If only it had happened at all.
