v1 How cruel the fiery stars of time must be.
 To let us smoulder, twisted in an Earth That burns with memories of pointless birth
 And taunts us endlessly

v2 Was it really all that long ago
 When optimism hung on glorious frames
 In galleries to dance among the flames
 That those stars daily throw?

Br How did we come to throw it all away,
 To grow from red hot childhood into this,
 An embered memory of how we kissed
 With nothing in our way?

v3 Do you suppose we'll ever see the day We'll walk again, our hands fused into one,
 Searching for a love spot in the sun
 Like we did yesterday?
