Just think how very different this could be: The deftest touch, the lightest squeeze, Then fingers wrap, and tensions ease, With willing spirits yearning to be free.

v2 If I had the nerve somehow
To tell you what I feel right now,
Just think of what my words could bring about:
The senses stir, the meaning grows,
Then yawning chasms shrink and close,
With willing spirits boldly reaching out.

v3 If I had the bravery And strength to hold you close to me, Just think of what misgivings we could still, The doubts that peel, and start to slide, With human warmth revealed inside, And willing spirits sighing to fulfil.
