v1 So here's a thought, said Alice,
While strolling one fine day,
Let's find our flaws, and wish them clean away;

v2 And tell you what, said Alice,
As she rested in the shade,
Let's just excuse the errors that we've made;

v3 And after that, said Alice,
As she lay back in the sun,
Let's just pretend no harm was ever done;

Br1 We could whisper away
The deeds of the day,
In voices that never quite mean what they say;

Br2 We could cover from sight
The wrongs of the night,
In gestures that never quite make it to light;

v4 And furthermore, said Alice,
As she stood to turn away,
Let's just disown the things we do and say.
